H.R. 2119, the Family Violence Prevention and Services Improvement Act of 2021, (FVPSA) is a comprehensive reauthorization of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act that will enhance and refocus federal investments to address intimate partner violence (IPV).

On average, this bill will increase funding by 37 percent for state programs and 45 percent for Tribal communities, allowing programs to:

- Increase prevention efforts, therefore reducing the rate of intimate partner violence and decreasing the funding needs for support services;
- Increase dedicated resources for over-represented and underserved populations, including communities of color, Tribal communities, LGBTQ+ individuals, and people with disabilities; and
- Ensure survivors can receive culturally appropriate, accessible services.
