

Letters of Support for WIA from The Heartland Alliance

Mar 28, 2012

Honorable George Miller (D-CA)
2205 Rayburn House Office Building
DC

Dear Honorable Miller (D-CA),

Thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting the Workforce Investment Act of 2012 and for the bill's emphasis on improving services to meet the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment. I am particularly pleased by the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training funds for individuals with barriers to employment. This is an important step forward in ensuring our public workforce system works for all.

The economic crisis and sluggish recovery has had an impact on everyone in my community - but especially those with barriers to employment. It is vital that transitional jobs programs, workforce development services, education and training be available for these populations as on ramps into the jobs for the future. Providing these opportunities benefits individuals, employers and communities.

Again, thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting and release of the Workforce Investment Act of 2012. Its emphasis on supporting the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment is clearly reflected in the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training dollars, performance measures that take into account the characteristics of individuals with barriers to employment, and the integration of employment, education and training services to support pathways to good jobs for low-income individuals. This Act is a promising step in the right direction for individuals with barriers to employment

Sincerely,

Ms. Bishara Addison
1255 Euclid Ave
Cleveland, OH 44115-1810
216-696-5750 ext 228

Mar 27, 2012

Honorable George Miller (D-CA)
2205 Rayburn House Office Building
DC

Dear Honorable Miller (D-CA),

Thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting the Workforce Investment Act of 2012 and for the bill's emphasis on improving services to meet the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment. I am particularly pleased by the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training funds for individuals with barriers to employment. This is an important step forward in ensuring our public workforce system works for all.

The economic crisis and sluggish recovery has had an impact on everyone in my community - but especially those with barriers to employment. It is vital that transitional jobs programs, workforce development services, education and training be available for these populations as on ramps into the jobs for the future. Providing these opportunities benefits individuals, employers and communities.

Again, thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting and release of the Workforce Investment Act of 2012. Its emphasis on supporting the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment is clearly reflected in the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training dollars, performance measures that take into account the characteristics of individuals with barriers to employment, and the integration of employment, education and training services to support pathways to good jobs for low-income individuals. This Act is a promising step in the right direction for individuals with barriers to employment

Sincerely,

Mr. Charles Jones
3331 Carpenter St SE
Washington, DC 20020-2369

Mar 27, 2012

Honorable George Miller (D-CA)
2205 Rayburn House Office Building
DC

Dear Honorable Miller (D-CA),

Thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting the Workforce Investment Act of 2012 and for the bill's emphasis on improving services to meet the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment. I am particularly pleased by the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training funds for individuals with barriers to employment. This is an important step forward in ensuring our public workforce system works for all.

The economic crisis and sluggish recovery has had an impact on everyone in my community - but especially those with barriers to employment. It is vital that transitional jobs programs, workforce development services, education and training be available for these populations as on ramps into the jobs for the future. Providing these opportunities benefits individuals, employers and communities.

Again, thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting and release of the Workforce Investment Act of 2012. Its emphasis on supporting the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment is clearly reflected in the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training dollars, performance measures that take into account the characteristics of individuals with barriers to employment, and the integration of employment, education and training services to support pathways to good jobs for low-income individuals. This Act is a promising step in the right direction for individuals with barriers to employment

Sincerely,

Dr. Paul Haider
501 N Clinton St
Apt 905
Chicago, IL 60654-8885
(773) 680-1252

Mar 27, 2012

Honorable George Miller (D-CA)
2205 Rayburn House Office Building
DC

Dear Honorable Miller (D-CA),

Thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting the Workforce Investment Act of 2012 and for the bill's emphasis on improving services to meet the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment. I am particularly pleased by the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training funds for individuals with barriers to employment. This is an important step forward in ensuring our public workforce system works for all.

The economic crisis and sluggish recovery has had an impact on everyone in my community - but especially those with barriers to employment. It is vital that transitional jobs programs, workforce development services, education and training be available for these populations as on ramps into the jobs for the future. Providing these opportunities benefits individuals, employers and communities.

Again, thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting and release of the Workforce Investment Act of 2012. Its emphasis on supporting the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment is clearly reflected in the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training dollars, performance measures that take into account the characteristics of individuals with barriers to employment, and the integration of employment, education and training services to support pathways to good jobs for low-income individuals. This Act is a promising step in the right direction for individuals with barriers to employment

Sincerely,

Mr. John Joy
1309a James Ct
San Mateo, CA 94401-3150
(650) 802-5157

Mar 28, 2012

Honorable George Miller (D-CA)
2205 Rayburn House Office Building
DC

Dear Honorable Miller (D-CA),

Thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting the Workforce Investment Act of 2012 and for the bill's emphasis on improving services to meet the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment. I am particularly pleased by the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training funds for individuals with barriers to employment. This is an important step forward in ensuring our public workforce system works for all.

The economic crisis and sluggish recovery has had an impact on everyone in my community - but especially those with barriers to employment. It is vital that transitional jobs programs, workforce development services, education and training be available for these populations as on ramps into the jobs for the future. Providing these opportunities benefits individuals, employers and communities.

Again, thank you for the efforts that went into the drafting and release of the Workforce Investment Act of 2012. Its emphasis on supporting the workforce, education and training needs of individuals with barriers to employment is clearly reflected in the inclusion of Transitional Jobs programs as an allowable use of training dollars, performance measures that take into account the characteristics of individuals with barriers to employment, and the integration of employment, education and training services to support pathways to good jobs for low-income individuals. This Act is a promising step in the right direction for individuals with barriers to employment

Sincerely,

Ms. Christina Warden
3526 214th St Apt 1w
Matteson, IL 60443-2594